To GROMYKO [a], SUDENKO, AVSEEVICH.

I report:

Mr. [MISTER] ORLEMANSKI arrived in FAIRBANKS 20 April at 16 hours[,] departed 21 April at 12 hours by C-47 plane[,] pilot YUKOV[,] to go as far as YAKUTSK and [from] YAKUTSK by another [to] [C<sup>4</sup> CHITA]. I report to you that ORLEMANSKI talked [B<sup>a</sup> to me] about his mission, declaring that he was [at the best] arbiter[ARBITROR] [b] [in] America [l group unidentified or garbled] English and Polish languages and that he was going at the personal invitation of Comrade STALIN[:] all this in the presence of officers of the American intelligence, who during his stay in Notes: (a) Erroneously encoded as GROMOYKO.

(b) ARBITROR, which seems to be a correct recovery, is not good Russian (ARBITRI); the writer may have been influenced by Father ORLEMANSKI's use of a non-standard English form, such as the rare ARBITROR or the obsolete ARBITROH, or even of the standard ARBITRATOR.

All words and punctuation in square brackets, unless with a validity symbol or of an obviously explanatory nature, have been supplied by the translator.
